Point of View

Dear _____,

Today in class, we learned that there are many ways to be different, and it can also include differences in how we think about things—our opinions, values, and interests. But diversity also allows for learning and the ability to see things from another person's point of view. When we can see things from another person's perspective, we begin to have empathy, which allows us to put ourselves in another person's shoes. We used a 3-2-1 strategy to learn 3 facts about a person, two similarities they had with that person, and one thing they disagreed with.

Please encourage your student to explain and try the 3-2-1 challenge at home or in the community when they struggle to see another perspective.

Please do not hesitate to reach out with any questions or concerns.

Best,
